GAZETTE FIRST TO REACH SNOWBOUND CITY, SAYS ESSER

Mr. Esser told of the warm welcome given the Gazette by the Wisconsin Kiltzies, Milton Junction, when he arrived in Fort Atkinson with a big supply of Gazettes. Thursday afternoon, the first newspaper to get to the snowbound city since the storm.

"A Milwaukee newspaper man was among those stranded with us at the Black Hawk hotel and he was doing considerable business with his paper would be the first to get through to Fort Atkinson," said Mr. Esser.

"Prof. L. H. Stringer, Milton college, and I disagreed with the first. You can imagine our feeling Wednesday afternoon, when we saw newspapers selling Gazettes on the streets, the only newspaper to be delivered."

"I can't understand how your man got through with them." Mr. Kiltzie left the Gazette in his touring car at 2:30. Thursday afternoon, after buying big driftings and long stretches of untraveled highways, finally reached Fort Atkinson and continued on to Jefferson, arriving there at 5:30.

Madison.—Senators in the upper house of the Wisconsin legislature favor strict enforcement of prohibition and are going to the veto when a showdown comes during the present session, they announced Friday.
The days plan to wage the prohibition battle around the resolution of Senator Timothy Burke, which declares the Eighteenth amendment to the constitution and memorial Congress to attempt to get the people a further amendment which will provide for its repeal.

Out and Out Vote.
They announced Friday, through E. N. Hicks, legislative counsel for the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon league, that a substitute amendment will be offered to the Burke resolution calling for a referendum of the people of the state on the issue he raises. This would bring a straight-out-and-out vote on the prohibition amendment by the entire legislature.

They intend to put this proposal squarely before the voters, Mr. Hicks said. "They can accept it and go to the mar at election, or they can show their honesty and attempt to vote down our substitute to be offered later."

TWO JAILED IN WELL MYSTERY NEAR WAUPUN.
Pathetic Story of Lonely Farm Drudge Revealed in Double Arrest.

Fond du Lac.—Isolated in a rural community, not even accepted in the Dutch settlement in which she was a member, her entire life spent in drudgery on a farm, is the pathetic history of Mrs. Paula Peters, 40, with her grandfather, John Van Burgh Sr., being held at the county jail charged with murdering her husband, William Peters, whose body was found Dec. 29 in an abandoned mine offering Mrs. Peters, near Waupun.

The woman, when visited in her cell at the county jail late Thursday, did not seem to realize the grave charges preferred against her.

Mrs. Peters, who is rather short and stocky, was attired in a rusty black dress with black lace at the neck and cuffs.

She was born, according to her own story, in 1873, near Waupun. Her mother, which occurred when she was a baby, her father married again and with the death of her step-mother, she was sent to the home of her grandfather, near Waupun, where she resided with him and her grandmother until her death.

COMMITTEE URGES STATE MILITIA BE DONE AWAY WITH

BLAINE AND SOCIALIST MEMBERS VOTE FOR DRASTIC VOTE.
SENATE OPPOSED
Upper House to Force Compromise, Belief; Troops Attacked at Hearing.

Madison.—Abolition of the Wisconsin National guard is called for in a favorable report by a bipartisan state militia committee, brought into the lower house of the legislature Friday.

With Assemblyman W. A. Frehott, Waukesha, and Frank Prescott, Milwaukee, dissenting, the Blaikie bill, sponsored by socialists, was backed by eight administration and socialist members of the committee and sent to the floor for passage. This measure completely goes away with the trained militia.

Compromise is seen. While the committee action is doubtful, socialists to reflect the attitude of the assembly toward the state National guard, state senators, when they learned of the committee report, expressed their opposition to the measure, and they would be able to kill any attempt to do away completely with Wisconsin's armed force. They expressed the opinion that a compromise would be worked out, making the proposition of an advisory general, but leaving the guard intact.

There followed an extended hearing, in which state officials joined with women's organizations and the State Federation of Labor in urging adoption of the bill. The national guard was characterized by all as an adjunct to militarism, which they believed still formidable in this country.

Lieut. Gov. George F. Comings made the principal address in support of the bill. He reiterated his belief, expressed at a previous hearing, that military training was demoralizing to young men and a center of militarism in the state. The state was spending $1,000,000 annually for it. (Continued on Page 12.)

GAREY ELECTION BILL ENGROSSED

Would Permit Scratching of Ballot at Primary Polls in State.
Madison.—The one primary election reform bill before the present session of the legislature was advanced to the senate today when by a vote of 13 to 10, it was sent to engrossment and final reading.

This proposal, introduced by Senator A. E. Garey, Barrington, would permit scratching of the ballot at primary elections to enable any elector to vote for a different party representative at the primary. Under the present statute the vote is confined to a single column for county as well as state offices at general elections.

Senator Garey's proposal would break down the dominance of party organization and prevent one man rule, as well as tending to make the primary election, in a way, a free election.

The vote on the Garey bill was: For engrossment: Senators—Barrington, Bilgier, Burke, Cassin, Clegg, Clark, Crary, Kunkin, Lusk, Teasdale, Titus, Warden. Against engrossment: Hirsch, Hilber, Johnson, Quick, Roethlisberger, Schumann, Severson, Smith, Staudenmayer, White.

MANY VIOLATE NEW TRAFFIC MEASURES

Comparatively Little Attention Paid to Laws Effective, Friday.

Janesville motorists appeared to pay comparatively little attention to the new traffic ordinances which became effective here, Friday.

While the ordinance prohibiting complete turns on any intersection on certain sections of Main and Milwaukee streets was not violated extensively, there were many flagrant offenses under the law providing for parallel parking for one block on North Bluff and North Jackson streets and on the east and west sides, respectively, of South Bluff and North River streets for one block.

"We expect considerable difficulty in enforcing the new 'parallel parking' regulations until the snow gets off the pavements and zones can be marked out," said Chief of Police Charles Newman.

While police warned a number of automobile drivers about making turns at the intersections, no arrests were made and no one was taken to court. Despite the regulations, many cars were parked at right angles to the curb on North Bluff street, on the east side of South Bluff and on the west side of North River. It is expected several days will be required to get the ordinances working smoothly.

EDGERTON INQUEST HELD UNNECESSARY

No Eyewitness Found in Fatal Accident at Railroad Tracks.

No inquest will be held into the death of a Milwaukee locomotive killed by a St. Paul locomotive at Edgerton Thursday afternoon, County Coroner Lynn Whaley, Janesville, said Friday. The facts bear out a statement that the death was an accident.

No eye witnesses could be found to the tragedy which had brought the emergency of Edgerton to the aged father, William Attebery, investigation by Chief of Police Springer showed the woman was walking down the spur track on her way to work and that the switch engine was backing to the west with five cars on the front end, so that the engineer and fireman did not see the woman.

Used by Crew
George Dunn, Madison, was the conductor for the freight train and Fred Schanz, the engineer. Conductor Dunn was in the station at the time of the accident. The brakeman was on the last freight car and noticed the woman after the whole train had passed over it.

The accident occurred in front of the coal shed of the P. & W. warehouse. Miss Attebery was employed at the P. & W. Barley stemming plant nearby.

First in Seven Years
The accident is the first fatal one on the railroad in Edgerton in seven years.

Miss Attebery was born in Oregon, and was married by her father and two brothers, Joseph and Frank Edgerton, and one sister, Mrs. Emma Larson, South Dakota.

Fatal Accident
The fatal accident occurred at 2 p. m. Saturday at the Carlson undertaking rooms. Burial will be in Fasset cemetery.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY INSPECTED

Janesville's new high school library, which was inspected Thursday and Friday by Miss Edith Fair, of the Wisconsin State Library, was especially interested in the high school library, complete equipment for which has but recently been completed.

Checking desk for the library came the first of the week and had been damaged considerably in transit. It is a low desk so that the librarians can get at the books without filling cabinets, magazine and newspaper racks and shelving have all been completed and students are using the new equipment.

Miss Irene Bull, librarian, and they find the variety of reference books and periodicals a help in their studies.

A special feature is the teachers' library, conducted on the same plan as the students.

Superintendent of Parker Pen Plant Resigns

After 23 years at the Parker Pen factory the last 15 of which have been spent as factory superintendent, J. A. McDonough, 220 Forest Park boulevard, has resigned to go into the Automotive garage, 209 East Milwaukee street, with his son, William.

McDonough started with the Parker Pen as a rubber turner, May 1, 1898 when it was located in the room on East Milwaukee street now occupied by the Elks club. He continued with it after it used the second and third floors of the Gazette building, and after it occupied the new building at the corner of Court and Division streets, eight years working up to the superintendency.

William McDonough, who had also been with the Parker Pen, has been in the garage business for some time.

CLEVER SCHEME IS WORKED BY EASTERN CROOK

One of the cleverest schemes for obtaining money under false pretenses that has come to the attention of Janesville police in some time is related in a bulletin received at the station from Chief of Police Philip T. Smith, New Haven, Conn., requesting the capture of Henry D. Booth, with the following aliases: John J. Murray, Charles W. Williams, W. R. Campbell, Charles E. Goodhue and Louis A. Ackley.

Booth is wanted for defrauding one of the leading banks of New Haven of $2,500. The way he worked his game was something like this:

Under the name of Henry D. Booth he visited the Second National bank in New Haven and asked to be introduced to a competent attorney. This bank readily complied with, and Booth then requested the lawyer that he hold a note for $2,500 against Myron T. Killington, 1506 North Jackson avenue, Wilmington, Del. He explained that the note was originally for $3,000 but that $500 of this had been paid.

He requested the attorney to collect it, so a letter was written to Killington. A few days later Booth called to see if a reply had been received and upon learning that there had been no response, asked the attorney to write again. A week later when Booth called again, he was informed that a response had been received, also a check for $2,500 on a Wilmington bank.

The lawyer then deducted his commission and gave Booth his personal check for the balance. Booth both went to the New Haven bank where Booth cashed the check and supposedly put the money on deposit. The next day the lawyer called to see if a reply had been received and upon learning that there had been no response, asked the attorney to write again. A week later when Booth called again, he was informed that a response had been received, also a check for $2,500 on a Wilmington bank.

$25 Damage in Fire at School

Fire, originating above the boiler room in the Grant school at 12:15 p. m., Friday, threatened for a time to result seriously until the fire department put it under control with hand pumps. Woodwork too close to the boiler and chimney without sufficient protection was blamed for the fire, which did about $25 damage. The only one in the building when the fire originated, was R. W. Bergman, the janitor, who watched the burning wood and turned in a still alarm. School was held as usual Friday afternoon.

MASS MEETS HELD FOR EDGERTON GAME

SCHOOL PROPOSAL SHOWDOWN MONDAY

Whether a new school building is built in Footville, providing room for a grade and high school, with seven or eight districts participating in the project is to be decided at a meeting there; Monday night, when the various school districts will report.

SEN. MORRIS WILL SPEAK AT BANQUET

Discuss Legislation at Dinner of Merchants and Manufacturers Friday.

Effects pending state legislation may have upon business, some of these disbursements, will be explained to Janesville merchants, manufacturers and other citizens at a banquet in the Myers hotel at 6:30 p. m. Friday night. Senator Oscar Morris of Milwaukee will be the speaker.

In a telephone message Friday morning to Oscar N. Nelson, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, Senator Morris said his talk would be general and not entirely on bills affecting any particular classes or business. In view of conditions existing which have forced several large manufacturing concerns to withdraw from Wisconsin, his discussion is expected to have more than ordinary significance.

PORK AND THE OLD HOME TOWN.

There has been much criticism of the passage of the bill appropriating $50,000,000 for the improvement of rivers and harbors of the United States. This measure is always designated by critics as "pork." But as one newspaper very aptly says the criticism is usually leveled against appropriations for places other than that in which the newspaper is located. For instance the Milwaukee Journal abhors "pork" and yet one has been unable to find a word of definite criticism of the appropriation for the harbor of Milwaukee, in this bill of $500,000 for improvement and $118,000 for maintenance.

Then there are other harbors in Wisconsin which profited by the "pork." Menominee and Marquette, Sturgeon Bay canal, Green Bay, Kewaukee, Two Rivers, Manitowish, Sheboygan, Racine and Keshishah. Then there is also an appropriation of $100,000 for the Fox river in Wisconsin.

Does one gather that Milwaukee harbor and those other lake harbor improvements are "pork" and not needed but are in the bill for the sole purpose of getting money out of the government regardless of either value or necessity? We do not believe so. We want Milwaukee harbor to be the best in the state, able to care for the large and increasing tonnage offered there. If that is "pork" along with all other appropriations for the same general purpose, why not say so plainly regardless of injuring the city and the personal feelings of its association of commerce and other organizations which have been advocating the need for the appropriation.

Why do we have to note that the Caloosahatchee or the Tombigbee or the Snake river far away are picked as wicked examples of "pork"?
Let it be understood that for each improvement,
each piece of "pork," there has been a tremendous local demand, a government survey and estimate and some of the newspapers with the loudest objection to "pork" have strongly advocated local improvements.

The whole trouble seems to be that the government, except for those harbors which are necessary for naval purposes, ought not to be in the business of either making or maintaining harbors.
But the "pork" critics never go that far and are never honest enough apparently to admit that these improvements are of necessity, or should be paid for by the committees. If New York wants a harbor maintained why not let New York do it, all and Milwaukee the same—spend the $500,000 out of the city tax receipts for its harbor and keep away from the federal treasury?

Until each section is willing to criticize its own appropriation and quit the bunk and political dodging, we shall have this brand of legislative "pork." The government should get out of the habit of making any river and harbor improvements.

Old Tom Corwin once said something about going through a slaughter house to an open grave. It would seem that bills in the Wisconsin legislature have started down a very path
through the assembly and found both the slaughter house and the open grave in the state senate.

BIG DAY FOR JANESVILLE.

Turning out the first complete car of the Chevrolet company on Wednesday was an event in which every person in this section of Wisconsin has an interest. Getting the line of automobiles started and production gradually increasing as machinery and men work out the plan and the purpose of the company will mean a great deal to Janesville; and everything that helps this city helps Southern Wisconsin, makes better markets, increases the merchandising opportunities and ramifies all branches of near by activity.

It marks the beginning of a real, honest and conservatively growing Janesville. Taking a leaf from the Book of Experience of the years 1919
and 1920, there has been no inflated speculation
and fiction of hope since the Chevrolet and Fisher Body companies' plans were announced in the Gazette last September. The city has been skeptical and each citizen may be said to have suddenly hailed from Missouri, where it is necessary to be shown. That has been a good thing and the result has been all the more gratifying since the climax with actual production has been reached.

The fact that the two companies will have no outside tasks—will be in no business but making the cars—has put an added responsibility on the citizens of Janesville in seeing that necessary labor called here, is well housed. We cannot afford

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

By FREDERIC J. HASON

Washington.—Indiana has something that none of her sister states can boast of when it comes to presenting talent for big time political vaudeville.

Several states offer stars of greater or lesser magnitude—soloists, monologues, jugglers and slight-of-hand artists. One or two present comedians. One—Ohio—has a trio. But it remains for Indiana to produce a quartet, the Hoosier Harmony
Four—Albert Jeremiah Beveridge, lyric tenor;
Thomas Riley Marshall, second tenor; Samuel M.
Ralston, baritone, and James E. Watson, basso.

The act of these vocalists extraordinary opens with "On the Banks of the Wabash," includes
"The Presidential Blues," and closes with "We Want to Go." And the place where each and every one of them wants to go is not back to old Virginia, or down in Dixie, but No. 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C., the mansion now tenanted by Warren G. Harding.

It should be added, of course, that every member of this quartet is a soloist and artist of varied accomplishments, perfectly capable of putting on the act by himself if anything should happen to his associates.

Albert Jeremiah Beveridge undertakes to stage a comeback last year when he sought a return to the United States senate over the political dead body of Harry S. New. He defeated New in the republican primaries, and it was rather taken for granted that he would be elected, which would place him in position to make his bid for the presidency, but the unexpected happened and when Harry New takes off the senatorial toga it will be to drape it about the ample form of Samuel M. Ralston.

However, recent reports from Hoosierdom
about a meeting of the Indiana Republican Editorial association, indicate Beveridge does not regard himself eliminated as a presidential possibility. He has served notice that he will fight to the death for the preservation of the state primary law, and this is interpreted as meaning that he intends to be Indiana's favorite son at the next republican national convention, or know the reason why.

That reason he may discover in the person of the James B. Watson, who is understood to have presidential notions of his own. If Beveridge can defeat Watson in the Indiana presidential preference primary, he will earn the right to be considered seriously. Watson not only controls the republican state organization, but has demonstrated time and again that he is a vote-getter par excellence. He is rated as one of the greatest campaigners in the country, he has few equals on the stump, and he can take a voter by the hand and tell him he is glad to see him in words and tones such that the average citizen can only regret he has but one ballot to give to the Hoosier hymnologist.

Also it should be borne in mind that Senator
Watson knows a thing or two about politics.
When the Indiana primary comes around he may not figure as a presidential candidate himself.
He may appear as an aggressive champion of the renomination of President Harding and insist that the state delegation be made up of men who will support the incumbent, that should be the play,
and if it were successful, it is evident Watson would occupy an enviable strategic position in the national convention in event anything happened to Harding.

On the other hand, Watson may ask that the Indiana delegates be instructed for him in order to make sure the state's vote is given to Harding at that choice, with the understanding that Watson's name will be dropped if the president is out of running, or events may be shaped themselves that Watson will decide to make a straight out-and-out fight as his favorite son.

On the democratic side of Indiana politics, Samuel M. Ralston wins first consideration because he is the man who defeated Beveridge last November. Any democrat who gets himself elected governor or United States senator in Indiana becomes at once a presidential possibility, and Ralston has turned both tricks. He has had his term as governor and on March 4 he will enter the senate.

There is nothing psychologic about Mr. Ralston. He is a solid, substantial individual and his record is one that will bear any kind of scrutiny.
Along with Governor Smith of New York, he is one of the few democrats of presidential size in the United States who have given recent demonstrations of ability to carry elections, and that is something the democratic party will consider when selecting a standard bearer next year.

Thomas Riley Marshall is distinctly a presidential possibility, completing the Indiana quartet though at this time it appears unlikely he will be a candidate. Almost anything can happen in the next democratic national convention and several different sets of circumstances may eventuate, in any one of which it might be the thing to do to nominate Mr. Marshall.

As governor of Indiana and as vice president, Mr. Marshall earned the wholesome respect and the genuine regard of his party and of the country generally. Like Senator-elect Ralston, he lays no claim to brilliancy, but is of the rugged, dependable timber somewhat rare, which, whether taken from the republican or democratic woods,
can be turned into safe, sound and efficient public officials. He qualifies easily as the kind of man of whom it can be said, in connection with the presidency, as it was once said of another,
that the country might go farther and do worse,
and probably will, if Marshall had been nearer the White House than any man who has not been been president. People in general do not realize just how near that was. When Woodrow Wilson was stricken with his almost fatal illness, he was unquestionably incapacitated to discharge the duties of his high office and unwritten history has it that Vice President Marshall would have succeeded him but for the insistence of two persons that the true condition of the president be kept secret and only death be permitted to remove him from his high office.

At this time to do anything that will cripple the operation of the plants which mean so much to the labor of the city as well to every other interest within our boundaries.

What we need now is a diplomatic seamstress
to put a patch of peace on the seat of war in Europe.

There is always one thing about a snow storm:
It is the worst ever. If one wants a real snow storm to think about just read the Gazette files of March, 1921. The snow was deep enough on Main street to hide Bill Lathrop.

THE FAVOR.

"Years ago," said old Bill Brown,
"When times were bad and my luck was down,
I asked a favor—a friend I had.
He loaned me some money and said:
To do this turn for a good old friend.
Here's fifty dollars for you to spend.
Take it and use it, and when you can
You can pay it back if you like, old man."

"I paid it back in a month or two
And said to myself with that I'm through,
I've kept my friend and I've squared the debt.
But I find I'm not done with that favor yet;
It haunts me on my neck like a dog's tail.
It follows me round like a dog's tail.
And this I have learned without a doubt—
A favor is something that won't wear out."

"A bunch of his relatives I have hired,
And kept them on when they should be fired;
I've been to the court and put up bail
For a cousin of his they sent to jail.
I've bought tickets for suppers and church bazars."

"And rattles for bed quilts and motor cars
From his aunts and uncles who'd heard that he Had once done a very good turn for me."

"To's dead and gone, but the favor stays
As fresh and young as in early days
And never a week goes by but what I must do for his tribe, what I'd rather not.
So I say get along in this world, young man,
Without any favors, a best you can.
Don't ask for a thing you don't want.
For a favor is something that won't wear out."

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON

We have our moments of deep depression when we feel we will never be able to select a hat that will do good to anybody else as it does to the salesman.

The Queen of Sheba gazed about her in amazement.
"The half has not been told," she said.
"It never is when a woman is doing the telling," retorted Solomon, who is reputed to have been wise.

For the fifth time this year, Trotsky is down
and out and about to resign.

Who's Who Today

JEAN JULES JUSSERAND.

One of the most highly esteemed men in the national capital is Jean Jules Jusserand, ambassador from France to the United States, who has just completed his twentieth year at that post.

Ambassador Jusserand is a scholar as well as a diplomat.
He has a deep knowledge of English literature,
having written several volumes on the subject. His wife is an American woman. The ambassador has a daughter, of former President Roosevelt and made frequent visits to the White House either to discuss literature or to play tennis with the former president.

Ambassador Jusserand
who presented his credentials
as his country's ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary here Feb. 7, 1923,
has been in the diplomatic service in France since attaining his majority. This was the first time he held as ambassador, he having been minister to Denmark at the time of his transfer. On account of his scholarship ability degrees have been conferred on him by Harvard, Chicago and Columbia universities and the University of Pennsylvania. He is a grand officer of the Le-

INCOME TAX FACTS
Federal Government.

NO. 15.

Bad debts constitute a considerable item in the returns of many taxpayers and may be treated in one of two ways: (1) by a deduction from income in the year in which the debt is ascertained to be worthless in whole or in part, or (2) by a deduc-tion from income of an addition to a reserve for bad debts. When satisfied that a debt is recoverable only in part, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may allow a deduction for the amount lost in part. Partial deductions are allowed with respect to specific debts only. The taxpayer must be able to show with a reasonable degree of certainty the part that is uncollectible.

Where a taxpayer, under the established business practice, sets up annually a reserve for bad debts, reasonable additions to such reserve
during the year, in the discretion of the commissioner, may be deducted. In such case, debts written off in the books of a taxpayer may be charged against the reserve, and must not be claimed as a deduction from gross income unless the debt was outstanding on December 31, 1920.

Taxpayers who adopted either of the two methods for the year 1921 must use the same method for the year 1922, unless permission to change is obtained from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

A taxpayer using the reserve method should include in his return showing the amount of such reserve to such amounts, the total amount of notes and accounts receivable at the beginning and end of the taxable year, and the amount of debts ascertained to be worthless or partially worthless and charged off against the reserve account during the taxable year.

Bad debts can be deducted only for the year
in which they are ascertained to be worthless and charged off the books of the taxpayer. The taxpayer should attach to his return a statement showing the propriety of any deduction claimed for a debt.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author

ALTHOUGH there is no going around the fact that the human body is the initial administration of medicines
helps patients to become well in relation to diseases accompanied by cough, cold, croup, whooping cough, I know of no cough medicine which deserves the name of cough cure in any case. So no one can say that he understands that I claim to have a cough cure. I claim nothing except desires to suggest to those who will mockery with their own cough's medicine, which, if it does no good, will at any rate do no harm, a fool proof cough medicine which I warrant only not to kill. Of course I do not offer any assurance whatever that the illness responsible for the cough will not kill you while waiting for my medicine to take hold, if you discover the directions and go on fooling with the medicine after the guaranty
period has expired.

The most dangerous ingredient in my cough medicine is sodium citrate.
Readers may recall that I dwell on sodium citrate a few days ago and pointed out the fact that they used it in the treatment of their children for the modification of cow's milk, sodium citrate being an alkali.
Nowadays lime water or milk of magnesia, a cereal water is generally used instead. The formula calls for an ounce of sodium citrate. Should any one mistake and swallow this under the impression that it is safe—
no harm done.

I offer this cough medicine in this unofficial way chiefly because grandmothers are decadent, no longer to be trusted in such emergencies.
They have been sophisticated by the specious arguments of the nostrum gentry, so that when a granny tells you what to mix for it nowadays you must be wary, for many may include in the recipe some harmless sounding dose that she has learned about from reading the ads of prescription fakes.
This is the formula:
Glycerin One ounce
Syrup of Marshmallows One ounce
Flaxseed, whole Teaspoonful Vaseline One pint
Syrup of peppermint Four drops Four the boiling water upon the flaxseed and allow to steep (do not boil) half an hour. Strain, and add the other ingredients. For a child some sugar may be added for further sweetening if desired. The dose is a tablespoonful for adults, a teaspoonful for children, every two hours, for two days.

This cough medicine is, in my judgment, the most efficient all round cough and cold cure for the home treasury of any household. It is a respiratory infection accompanied by stiffness, sneezing, coughing,
running nose, hoarseness, feverishness.

HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1923

This is read as an uncertain day.
According to astrologers, the dominant influences are unfavorable, although Mercury is well aspected in the morning. Mars and Uranus are both strongly aspected.
The location of this month, falling in the sixth house in square to Venus, denotes depreciation of certain securities, owing to unstable world conditions.

Saturn is in a place that gives warning to banks and other financial institutions to be extraordinarily cautious and conservative. The aspect is particularly threatening to England and may seriously affect the national exchequer.

Railways should profit at this time,
but there may be an unusual number of accidents and much damage to rolling stock.

All the stars forecast the greatest benefits for motion picture interests.
The educational possibilities of the screen will be generally accepted.
Expositions and fairs of every sort will flourish this year when educational matters will lead in interest.

An early spring that will be favorable to agriculture is foreshadowed by the stars, but there will be much severe weather in the next few weeks all through the east and the middle western states.

The lunation appears to indicate benefits for workers who will greatly improve their organizations and their methods of gaining concessions from employers.

Mars again gives warning that war
will continue to disturb many nations, constantly casting its shadow of anxiety over the United States.

It will be recalled that the stars
more than a year ago prophesied a recurrence of threatening events endangering even the peace of this country.

Much illness may mark the springtime and unusual care of the health is enjoined.

The death of a famous military man of leader is prognosticated. Many new names will be written on the roles of public service.

Let Us Help You Keep Your Clothes Clean

At the best this is a hard and tiresome task that lightens the task is a real help.
The use of a good material and the difficulty often experienced in getting domestic help have complicated the task of keeping the household clean.
The government has studied this problem of home economics and embodied the results of its study
in a booklet.

Its object is to make housecleaning simpler and easier and to show the time and labor saved from the materials used in the furnishing and care of the house. The booklet suggested a new method on the well-tested experience of practical housekeepers and on the results of the scientific study of household management.

The Wall Flower

By MARION RUBINCAM

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Pandora Nicholson is so very shy that meeting people, or being with any but her own family, is a positively painful experience. She lives as a "wall flower" with her aunt, Miss Gladys, and Uncle Peter, and their daughter, the popular Gladys. Her own father, gentle, whimsical, restless, impractical, lives and works there, but all of them in the little town of Norris City. Pandora is so often told she is a "wall flower" that she becomes more and more self-conscious. She makes one friend only, Alphonse Newberry, an earnest, awkward lad, and she loves him deeply for his friendliness to her. Then Gladys, who has her choice of all the boys in the town, decides that she wants Morton, and marries him. Pandora is heartbroken.

Gladys, an interior decorator from New York, whom she had met and sends for her to come to the city and look after her little son, Frankie. In the city among kindlier people, Pandora begins to find herself. She finds herself in love with George Ridgeway, whom she thinks is in love with Gladys. Gladys receives a cable, saying her husband is dead, and she is starting for Europe. They arrive in London. Pandora thinks Gladys is in London with Stanley Collins, who lives there.

THE NEW CITY.

Chapter 23.

Little by little Pandora worked it out for herself. She knew now, at least, why Gladys was so anxious about a second cable. She expected some word from Stanley, not about Frank, that was all told in his first message. But some word, some sign that the old feeling still lived, that he was still in love.

"Not a real declaration of affection," Pandora decided. "That would be impossible so soon. It's not a matter of convention, of course—I suppose it's just the good taste of the thing."

Having broken away from a family who were ruled by convention rather than intelligence, was now terribly afraid she might make a judgment of life by convention. So she sought to back-up everything she thought or did by intelligence.

"Still," she decided, "he'll soon know that Gladys is in town—she will have all sorts of friends in common."

That, as it happened, was not true. Gladys had lived in almost every other part of the world but London, here she had but one or two friends. Stanley knew an entirely different set of people, mostly men, in his own profession, and club men.

"Of course he must still be in love with her," the girl decided, turning about in her berth restlessly. "And of course, she'll hunt him up. She wants to see him, and she's so impulsive."

Then she began feeling sorry for George. For if Stanley was in love with Gladys, if Gladys cared for him more than George—but did she? Pandora wasn't sure—but if she did, of course, poor George was quite left out.

She went to sleep feeling very sorry indeed for George.

When she woke, it was with a curious feeling that something was wrong, at least something was quite different from the way it had been the night before. Frankie, peering down from his berth above hers, explained it.

"The engines have stopped, we're there!" he announced.

And that was it, the ship had pulled into Cherbourg and dropped anchor, the stillness woke her, and she was used to motion.

To Frankie "there" was vague. They were going some place, he neither knew nor cared where. The quiet boat meant arrival.

So Pandora dressed him and herself as hurriedly as possible and they went out in the early morning to see the sun making rose hued clouds and the mist masses of lovely blue over the sea and a picturesque city. As the sun warmed, the mist cleared, the red and green lights winked out on the ends of the big breakwaters. The town became clearer across the harbor, beyond were sand dunes and fields, with now and then a church spire rising from a cluster of roofs.

"They look like my 'tey' village," Pandora observed, hanging on the rail.

Cherbourg passengers were hurrying breakfast, finding luggage, getting on board the tender. Bags of American mail were being shot down an incline to be caught by men in blue uniforms and stored away in the tender's deck. Presently the two went in to breakfast, and after a time, the trip began again. They dropped anchor at Southampton.

The rest was more or less of a nightmare, as all customs experiences are. Pandora's idea of being useful amounted to nothing. She was told to mind Frankie, and stand off to one side, while George and Gladys fought through a crowd of people, all apparently possessed with sudden frenzy—nice people one had talked to and spent a lazy week with—then a lot of porters, and ended triumphant but tired with the bags slung safely in a van of the train.

They were at last safely in a carriage. Frankie swore solemnly he remembered perfectly the tiny compartments of the English trains, with padded blue seats and room enough for six only. It was the second train, they had the compartment to themselves, the crowd had gone ahead.

"I think I'll write you in the second section," said Gladys suddenly, and was out of the carriage and off to the telegraph office.

"Whom did you write?" George asked on her return, very dignified and very correct in grammar.

"The man in the moon," Gladys answered snuggly.

"You mean that girl on the porch?" "Yes, my boy, I know her!"

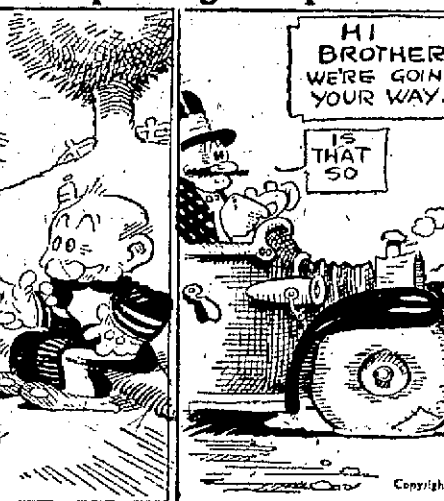

"Tom Jiney, a young man of moderate means whose ability to play golf has earned him a two-weeks' vacation with his employer at Tivertonhurst." "DICK DARE"

TODAY'S RECIPES
Baked Chicken—This is economical, as an old hen may be used and baked very tender. Roll pieces of chicken in flour, season with salt and pepper, lay in a roaster and cover with milk. Bake about two hours, according to age of chicken. (Potatoes may be placed in same pan and baked at same time or boiled separately and mashed.) Prune Whip—Whip the whites of two eggs, add one-half cup powdered sugar, stir in one cup of chopped and seeded prunes. Bake in buttered baking dish 20 minutes, or until light brown. Cream two tablespoons of butter with as much powdered sugar as it will hold. By using a tablespoon of cream or milk you can get more hard sauce for the same amount of butter.

Fruit Salad—Cut up, pineapple and grapefruit that may have been left from other meals. Add bananas, apples, nuts and marshmallows. Mix with boiled dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Cinnamon Toast—Toast one side of bread. Spread the other side lightly with butter and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Return to toaster until sugar melts. This is a pleasing change from plain buttered toast.

SUGGESTIONS
When preparing potatoes for baking use a mylar mit—such as used for cleaning cooking utensils to scrub them. It will be so nice and clean you will have no scruples in eating the skins.

Many winter flus come from the air in furnace heated houses being too dry. This condition is easily remedied by hanging a small tin bucket or can on an iron rod in each register. Keep filled with water using a funnel.

When washing black coats, trays and backs of brushes rub a little olive oil into them after washing. It will prevent them from turning gray and streaked.

When aluminum pans become black and dull looking, clean them with a soft cloth dipped with lemon juice. Rinse in warm water and they will shine like new.

To remove a splinter from the eye, draw the upper lid far over the lower and look down, then up again. This will release the splinter and it may be removed on the corner of a handkerchief.

It is a good idea to wash darning cotton before using it on stockings. This avoids shrinking when the hosiery is laundered.

Pad the floors with newspapers before laying the rugs. The papers eliminate the wearing friction of the rug against the coarse floor when it is walked on.

Heart and Home Problems
BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am at present very much in love with a young man. I have known him for about six months. Before I knew him he was very impatient to make my acquaintance. Although I am not exactly popular I have quite a few friends and my friends often teased him about the "other fellow." He thinks I am good-looking and tells his friends so. Also in a crowd he seems to prefer my company to that of other girls.

When in a crowd I am very cool to him, sometimes not exactly polite for I am afraid he will discover my secret and make a joke of it. He never asked me for a date. Does he think that I prefer some one else, or does he merely admire me?

It never pays to be discourteous to any one. Be polite and friendly to the young man wherever you are and go with him to the movies, to the company. The mere fact that you are friendly will not lead him to believe that you are in love with him. It would also be all right to ask him to call some time without setting the time.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have bobbed hair. I want to let it grow long again, but I am afraid to do so because little by little my hair is coming out. Do you think if I keep cutting my hair it will stop coming out? Do you know of any good remedy for the hair which is falling out? What do you suggest? I am 14 years old. THANK YOU.

Mange cure is very good to improve the condition of the scalp. You can get a bottle at the drug store and follow the directions on the bottle which apply to hair on the human head. At first you may find that your hair falls even worse than before using the tonic, but after two or three applications the falling will almost entirely stop and the growth of new hair will be stimulated. I would advise you to keep your hair short while you treat the scalp, because it can be more easily treated in this way.

Plain red vasoline is used on the eyelashes. Apply a very small quantity, by means of a toothpick. Be careful not to use too much, or to get it into the eyes. It does not really hurt the eyes, but it does not help them either and too much gives a very greasy appearance.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl in the middle of my teens and have been going a little with a boy of 18. He invited me to a party one of his friends, has brought me home from a few shows and asked me to take me to shows and parties several times, but as I am only 15 I can't go every time and every place I want to, and was not able to give him more than one date and that was to go to a party which occurred about two weeks ago.

I sent him a little hand-painted Christmas card. Was that correct? I am afraid he thinks I don't want to go with him, and I think a lot of him as a friend. Do you think he would think I was chasing him or hinting for a gift? I certainly would not have sent it if I had had that in mind. He seems to be a very sensible boy and I think a lot of him.

JUST FRIENDS.
It was all right for you to send the card because it showed that your refusal to accept all of the invitations did not come from any unwillingness to go with the boy. He will surely understand your spirit and will not think you are running after him.

HARMLESS HAIR CURLING
Hair in condition. Trim off the broken ends and massage the scalp every day until you feel it tingle from the improvement.

Artificial waving of the hair is never actually good for it and often harmful. But if you are careful you can keep a loose, natural looking curl most of the time without doing any appreciable damage. I never really advocate hair curling, because I know the average woman is apt to overdo it either because she is afraid she won't be thorough enough, or with an idea of making the curl "stay."

I know there are times when a wave is almost a necessity—an evening affair when a woman wants to look extra well (most of the straight haired ones look better so, if they only would believe it!) after the hair is washed, if it belongs to the wavy variety, and when traveling. I know a woman, too, who has a hair dresser come and wave her hair when she is ill in bed; she says she knows her face has a solemn expression then and she wants to counteract it as much as possible by the frivolity of waved locks!

The best way to wave the hair is to give it into thin strands, and to moisten these slightly. Then curl each one tightly around a thick kid curler, purchasable in any notion department, or around a thick wand of tissue paper. Given a roll of old muslin will do, the ends in any case must be tied together.

If you can do this at night it will give the hair plenty of time to set in a natural looking wave. If anyone is apt to see you, curlers being about the ugliest things in the world, wear a cap with a full to conceal your head; but not too hot iron must be used now and then.

Hobby—The kid curlers are not causing your hair to split on the ends. There is some other reason for the trouble. Possibly your scalp is not secreting enough oil to keep the

JEFFERSON

Jefferson—The butter and cheese demonstration, held Feb. 14 at Sullivan in connection with the Jefferson county farmers' institute, was successful. Exhibits came from almost every creamery and cheese factory in the county. These samples represented the general factory run as they were collected by committees and were not fixed up for the occasion. The grading was done by H. C. Larson, secretary of the Wisconsin Buttermakers' association, and J. E. Bechtler, Wisconsin dairy and food commissioner. Mr. Larson said there was considerable uniformity in the butter. He spoke strongly in favor of pasteurized sweet cream butter, on account of its better keeping quality. William Winder, cheese expert of the dairy and food commission, said the general run of cheese all over Wisconsin is put on to the market too young. The grades of butter ranged all the way from 87 to 95, while the cheese ranged from 84 to 94. This was not a competitive exhibit and the scores of individual factories will not be published. Each factory will receive a complete list of all scores, marked by number. The object of this demonstration was to find out the general run of the dairy factories and creameries in Jefferson county. The Palmyra institute was cancelled on account of impassable roads. The Five Hundred club met with Mrs. Robert Rockstroh Wednesday night at her home. He is waiting to see whether or not his friends will pay the fine. About 75 attended the Boy Scout banquet at the W. E. C. rooms Monday night. The Campfire girls served supper. Whenever anyone in my family catches cold and begins to cough and sneeze, and hawke and breathe heavy, it doesn't take me many minutes to fix up a remedy that will drive away all such troubles in double quick time. But now you've got a real medicine—mind you—the first spoonful you take acts directly on the membrane of the throat and nose, the tickling ceases almost instantly—the inflammation begins to disappear—up comes the stubborn mucus and after 24 hours every trace of the cough that frightened you is gone. SCANT SUPPORT BEHIND HEARING OF COMMITTEE

Madison.—The Wisconsin National Guard had but scant support before the assembly state affairs committee Thursday, when hearing was held on the Polakowski bill calling for its abolition. Adjutant General John C. Salzman told the committee he had been unable in the short time he has been in office to prepare an argument for the committee.

Mrs. E. V. Van Osstrand, Madison, representing the Daughters of the American Revolution, offered the only defense for the state's armed force. She urged its continuance as a protection to property and for the relief of destitute in times of need. A request of the adjutant general to continue the hearing was adjourned, acted on and the consideration closed.

Senators Horne, Charles. The lieutenant governor reiterated his belief that military training as a system, debauched young men, shattering their moral character.

Representatives of the state federation of labor and of the Women's Progressive association attacked the guard as a school of militarism. They emphasized that Wisconsin should take the first step toward abolition of the system.

L. A. Gordon, assistant secretary of state, appearing in support of the measure, urged that some such proposal be enacted, but suggested that the present bill be modified.

MEAD HITS MARK IN HIS FORECASTS

Sub-Zero Weather Arrives As Predicted—Tampa Boosts Him.

"Snow on the 9th of February and a cold wave with a week of sub-zero weather which will mark the beginning of real winter."

That was what L. C. Mead, weather prophet of Janesville predicted for this city way back in October. He may have slipped up in not guessing the snow that came Tuesday, but he certainly hit the mark when he said it was going to be below zero.

And, now, from far off Tampa, Fla., comes word that Wizard Mead was started the natives of the southland with his forecasts. Says the Tampa "Times" about him:

"L. C. Mead, who on last Dec. 27, by using the moon and its effects upon the earth upon which to base his forecast, predicted for the South Florida fair as follows: 'A week of fine weather is indicated for the Tampa fair the first week of February. Some rain or showers are due Monday the 5th, otherwise fair weather is strongly indicated for the week.'"

"In January, when Mr. Mead made his final February weather forecast, he accurately indicated for Monday the 5th, and may be somewhat threatening for Wednesday, the 7th, but fair weather is strongly indicated for the most of the week."

"Monday and Tuesday Mr. Mead's predictions came true."

"For the remainder of the month, he predicted in January that: 'A hot wave is due in Tampa for Wednesday, Thursday, the 14th and 15th. A severe cold wave will be sweeping the Great Lakes region and may be slightly felt in Tampa between the 10th and 18th. Dry weather should mostly prevail in Tampa for February.'"

Mead's prediction of the warm wave came true. The thermometer at Tampa shot up to 77 while his forecast for the Great Lakes section for cold was equally true. These things came true, reports received here show, despite a prediction by the government weather bureau that Tampa was to have a cold wave, which, by the way, never materialized.

46, of 151 After Jobs, Successful Through C. of C.

A total of 151 applications for jobs were received at the local Chamber of Commerce during January, according to announcement made Wednesday.

Forty-six of the applicants were placed by the chamber. Some of the difficulty experienced by the chamber in getting men placed is shown by actual instances. One had, who wanted a sort of work, was told to go to a certain address on South Bluff street to do an odd job. He looked at the slip of paper handed him and then remarked:

"I don't know if I can find it."

Another, who said he was willing to do anything offered, was told to apply at the Chevrolet Motors for a position as typist. He said: "I don't think I could stand doing that kind of work all day long."

He was a working young fellow. During January the chamber answered one business phone call. Thirty jobs were listed. People placed 39 rooms on the chamber records that they wanted to rent. Twenty-seven applied for houses and 10 wanted rooms. Twenty-seven Building and Loan payments were taken at the chamber and turned over to the association.

These duties were handled by the office force. Manager Oscar M. Nelson personally handled conferences in his office, answered correspondence, visited business houses, conducted committee meetings, planned and organized, investigated persons seeking endorsements, and kept alive to legislation of national, state and local significance that might be detrimental to Janesville's interests.

Besides these things, the traffic manager audited bills, quoted rates, traced shipments and routed shipments.

Boys' Physical Training Course Starts in Fall

Compulsory physical training for boys at the new high school will probably not be started until next September, according to Prin W. W. Brown. While that training was one of the new things in the school was to afford it has been necessary to abandon these plans for the present.

"As it is now necessary to teach gymnasium work to the girls, who have had it for years, and as the girls' gymnasium is not completed and will not be for some months due to erecting the new bleachers, it is doubtful if the boys' course in physical education will be started this semester," said Mr. Brown.

"Boys naturally get more anyway, in their day to day life and in their athletics, and can continue temporarily without this new education as they have been doing for years."

WISCONSIN TOBACCO MARKET. Edgerton.—The Wisconsin Tobacco Reporter Friday says: "Deliveries of tobacco, independent and pool crops, continue as the order of the day. Monday, with its snow storm, was not propitious for bringing the bundles in, but good days' leaf goods that are ready for the warehouse on the road to the warehouse points."

"The inquiry for old tobacco persists, and only the limited amounts available stand in the way of transactions."

"The resignation of Walter Mabbett from the head grader job with the pool has not been followed by an appointment of a head grader to the state. W. B. Wentworth of Edgerton, recently resigned as Edgerton manager of the American Smoke Co., is at the present time attending to the grading of pool leaf in the southern section under Law & Co. Mr. Mabbett, president of the pool, together with the warehouse manager, John Holten, and a northern manager, William Johnson, are directing the grading operations at northern points."

"The conditions in the northern market are more or less upset by the inauguration of legal action of the pool against M. J. Eckhardt & Son, Inc., for failing to deliver tobacco offered for sale by dissatisfied pool members. There are those among them who are holding back deliveries until the injunction proceedings shall have been finally settled. The defendants in the action are anxious to have the matter disposed of at an early date, and a hearing is set for the early part of next week."

"Whether the court rules one way or the other, the conflict now on has elements in it which are prominent with possibilities of a long drawn out campaign, the outcome of which will be watched with the keenest interest, not only in Wisconsin, but throughout the country."

RAILROAD WORKERS HAVE ROUGH TIMES IN SNOWY WEATHER

Running a locomotive in days like those when snow drifts pile the rails ahead is the job of a he-man.

The engine, with the heavy train behind it, may be rolling along at 50 miles an hour with everything seemingly nice. Then of a sudden there comes a jolt, old "iron sides" calls it quits and the engineer and fireman are thrown forward with a smash. If the drift happens to be large enough, it may mean "stuck" until help comes to pull the train back out. And, too, if that drift is very high, it may mean the fireman has to turn his efforts to shoveling the crew out in addition to helping shovel the locomotive free.

One of the things that engineer and fireman fear more than anything else during snow storms is that when the engine hits a drift at high speed the pilot, which is just in front of the pilot wheels, may snap off. If it does, it more often than not falls directly in front of the pilot wheels and then a derailment is inevitable with no knowing what the consequences.

One of the things the fireman dislikes most of all is to get drenched to the skin during a snow storm or from the drifts. While backing through the drifts, the snow pours through the cracks in the cab like flour. It covers the fireman from head to toe and when he gets near the door of the firebox, melts upon him.

In that soaked condition, he may have to go out upon the tender. When the door is open, the water-soaked clothes turn at once into a frozen mass. Then when he gets back into the cab, he melts again.
